Sheep from this Region, especially those roaming the rugged terrain of the Island of Pag enjoy a unique diet of salty island wildflowers and medicinal herbs like rosemary and sage. Grazing their way through the barren karst landscape, these wandering sheep contribute to the exceptional taste of Pag lamb and cheese. Thanks to the salt sediment carried by the Bura wind from the sea and the natural herbs and spices in their diet, Pag lamb and cheese have a distinct flavour prized by food enthusiasts worldwide.

Moreover, young sheep start by feeding exclusively on their mother's milk before transitioning to tender grass shoots in the spring. No food additives are given to them, ensuring the purest, most natural quality..
